Supporting Muslim Life On Your Campus

How prepared is your campus to support students during Ramadan?

How could your institution improve to encourage more Muslim applicants from around the globe?

What do you know about the Muslim community already on your campus?

How can you overcome issues of anti-Muslim bias that may be present at your institution?

Convergence offers a one-day Trainings to enhance your cultural competency for better supporting Muslim students, staff, and faculty.

No matter your role, your work to support Muslim life on campus matters. If you have a commitment to positively transforming your campus for Muslim students, staff, and faculty, this Training is for you.

Trainings in partnership with the Association of Campus Muslim Chaplains (ACMC) and a group of Muslim higher education professionals.
By the end of the day, you will be able to:

- Identify 2–3 ways Muslim life relates to your role on campus
- Locate the current positions of your campus on the “How Muslim-friendly is your campus?” rubric
- Complete the Strategic Planning Guide, including naming action steps towards campus improvements

Participants will hear about the lived experience of Muslim students and will be guided through a rubric that illustrates the highest levels of equity for Muslim life on campus. The Training will also equip you to begin strategic planning for campus improvement.

Sign up today to bring Convergence to your campus and better support the Muslim students, faculty, and staff who are part of your community!

Individual and group rates are available upon request. If you would like to register or have questions, please contact Convergence’s Director of Training and Facilitation Phoebe Oler at phoebe.oler@convergenceoncampus.org.
