Dr. Rahuldeep Gill

Educator, creator, storyteller | Keynote for Race & RSSIs

Dr. Rahuldeep Gill is a burgeoning filmmaker and an award-winning educator/author, with two decades of experience teaching about religious ideas and cultural identities.

Dr. Gill consults on television and film projects and his writings have appeared in the Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle, and Huffington Post. Oxford University Press published his first book, a highly-regarded set of poetry translations called Drinking from Love’s Cup. He is currently translating the poetry of the earliest Sikh scriptures while also writing his memoir about growing up in the United States as a racial and religious minority and immigrant.

Dr. Gill graduated with Honors from the University of Rochester (New York) and received his doctorate in Religious Studies from the University of California at Santa Barbara. He is a professor at California Lutheran University where he teaches a class on religion and hip-hop culture, in addition to courses on Asian-American religions, the Sikh tradition, and ancient Asian spiritualities. He lives in Los Angeles with his family and the world’s most beautiful blue-nose Pitbull.

Visit our website to learn more about the Convergence Symposium series!

Other Symposium topics include: Colonialism & RSSIs, Gender & RSSIs, Sexuality & RSSIs

The Symposium Series is a virtual set of one-day gatherings which will highlight the various identities that intersect with RSSIs and how those intersections should inform our scholarship, practices, and institutional policies. Working in conjunction with partners from higher education institutions and elsewhere, the symposia will bring together individuals who can speak best to emerging trends in theory and practice and how RSSIs are embedded within all aspects of diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) efforts.

Contact j.cody.nielsen@convergenceoncampus.org with questions.